USG declares: Opinions not of group

USG council and senators listen as Senator Brian Shuler explains his controversial Letter to the Editor.

□ Student leaders voice their concerns over a senator's controversial viewpoint.

By TRACY WOOD
The BG News

USG members made it clear that the views expressed by USG At-Large Senator Brian Shuler in Friday's The BG News were separate from the organization as a whole during their meeting Monday night.

The main topic of discussion was the letter written by Shuler in Friday's BG News. The letter stated his position against homosexual activity and his advocacy of getting rid of it. Due to the contents of the letter, many different members from a variety of organizations on campus and others came to the meeting to express their reaction to his letter.

The meeting began with the President of USG, Kevin Hussey emphasizing that the letter written by Shuler does not represent the overall opinion of USG.

According to Hussey,

Shuler's letter is not the official opinion of USG because it was not voted on. The only person who has the right to state their opinion for the student body is the president, and the letter does not represent Hussey's opinion.

"Everyone is entitled to their own opinion, but you must make it clear that it is your opinion. The problem with this letter was that it did not state this was not part of the overall USG's opinion. USG does not support what was in the paper," Hussey said.

Shuler expected a reaction to his letter in the paper, but has not altered his opinion concerning the issue. Shuler admitted being thoroughly upset when he wrote the article. He admits he might have gone too far. He still believes in part of what he wrote, but would not go into specifics about which part.

Many people were also questioning whether Shuler should maintain his position as an USG At-Large Senator. In reaction to any disciplinary action taking place Shuler is not concerned about any disci-

IBA formed to help students

□ International Business Association offers scholarships and improves overseas business skills.

By VALERIE BOWLING
The BG News

An International Business Association (IBA) has been formed to provide students with new work opportunities.

The organization was created as a result of a grant given by the U.S. Department of Education.

The grant, totaling over $170,000 for two years, will be used for providing scholarships to students. In addition, it will be used to enhance the international business curriculum and to help start the organizations.

Matt Ondrejko, a graduate assistant in the College of Business Administration and one of the leaders of the organization said, that it is a good idea for all business students to get involved with the IBA.

"Somewhere along the line you will deal with other countries, especially with the globalization of the business world," Ondrejko said.

Ribbon cutting ceremony held for renovated Health Center

□ New Health Center provides better organization for Health and Human Service majors.

By CAROLYN STECKEL
The BG News

After 10 years and an estimated $1.5 million spent on renovations, the newly remodeled health center was revealed to students and surrounding community members in a ribbon-cutting ceremony Monday.

U.S. Senator Mike DeWine was the keynote speaker at the opening.

The project took longer than expected due to a number of set backs, according to Clyde Willis, dean of the College of Health and Human Services.

"After we had been awarded the space and started minor renovations, we found the building contained a great amount of asbestos," he said.

The University then went back and applied for $1.5 million through the Ohio Board of Regions for the removal of the asbestos and major renovations to the building, Willis said. He said the application process also contributed to the delay of the renovations.

According to Willis, the original second floor contained hospital rooms that were devoted to housing two to four students when they were sick.

"We have completely demolished that floor and rebuilt it and added an annex," Willis said.

The second floor now houses offices for six academic departments. Criminal justice, environmental health, gerontology, public health, social work, and communication disorders will all have their academic offices in the Health Center Building.

"This is beneficial to students because it puts all the programs of the college into one building," Willis said. "We have included state of the art facilities for students who need to do their clinical training as well as research."

DeWine spoke to the audience about the importance of increased funding to aid health research for children, as well as effects of certain pharmaceuticals on children.

"About 80 to 85 percent of drugs on the market have never been tested on children," DeWine said.

He also stressed the importance of organ donation.

According to DeWine, 5 to 8 people die every day due to the lack of available organs for transplant.

"When faced with a tragic event and asked by hospitals whether to donate the organs or not, most people don't know what to say and end up saying no," DeWine said.

He said this situation can be avoided if people talked about it in advance.

"If people were to talk about it before tragedy strikes, it will make the decision easier to

Student reports off-campus rape

The BG News

A female University student reported she was raped Saturday night while at a party in the 400 block of S. College Street.

According to police reports, the woman met a man at a party the previous night and they exchanged phone numbers. The next night, she and her friend went to a party at that man's residence. She became intoxicated and didn't remember what happened that night.

The woman told police that after waking up the next morning with the man next to her, she realized she was not wearing clothes, except for a bra. In addition, she said there was a video camera next to the bed.

The report said the woman decided to go to the hospital after discovering a dried, white substance on her clothing. At the hospital, a rape kit was performed.

In addition, the report said the video tape included footage of the party, but not of the incident in question. Most of the video had been taped over.

Police said the incident is still under investigation.

Students question quality of education

□ Education students strongly urge legislators to solve funding problem in Ohio schools.

AMYJO L. BROWN
The BG News

Education majors at the University demanded that the state's legislators act on their pronounced commitment to education and bring the "big issues out of the closet."

On Saturday, current and prospective members of the Bowling Green Student Education Association held a seminar on the issue of school funding entitled "Making 'Cents' of the School Funding Crisis in Ohio."

The future teachers expressed their concern over the current learning environments children are forced into.

"There are schools in Ohio where coal burners heat the rooms, where bathrooms are located outside, where books still predict the future landing on the moon," said Shawna Talley, senior special education major. "How are these children going to compare and compete with the children learning in wealthier schools?"

Court case "DeRolph vs. Ohio" acted as a focal point for the controversy over the state's structure for financing schools.

The case went to Ohio's

Supreme Court which ruled that the current system for funding schools is not thorough and is inefficient for providing an equal, quality education to all children in the state of Ohio.

Students agree that the distribution of funding among Ohio schools is unequal and wrong, but feel their legislators are doing little to solve the problem.

"The state says the system is not morally right, but it is constitutional," said William Phillis, executive director for the Ohio Coalition for Equity and Adequacy of School Funding and keynote speaker for the seminar.

Student voice silent to University

Know what? I don't think I've heard the old slogan "students first" since Ribeau got his raise this summer. I'm not condemning the raise, but I do think that someone should have a talk with the Trustees about something called money and budgeting.

But prior to Ribeau's raise, the university was forever spewing its "students first" slogan at the public and at its students. Students first? They've got to be joking. Maybe that's why they stopped that slogan in its tracks. But really, it was a good idea. Just not one that I would consider finished.

When they said "students first," I think that they should have meant that they listen to the students' concerns, complaints and suggestions and make changes accordingly. Instead, I see an evil step-parental-like unit with what they may think are our best interests at heart, but we see it otherwise.

For example, the requirements for graduation. They might believe that they're giving us a well-rounded education by requiring certain classes outside of our fields. But most of us see it as a way of getting more money out of us. I don't get it. I'm an English Education major. Why did I have to take two sciences? Will I ever again have to know whether the mouth or the anus is formed first in human development?

But since when does the university listen to us? Have they been listening to our complaints about the price of our education? Do they keep us informed of changes that they're making because of us? Do they ever tell us why they do anything? Does anyone really read those evaluations that we take the time to fill out at the end of the semester?

Evaluations. Let's pause there for a moment. I'm convinced that no one reads those evaluations; they're just wasting trees. They told us last year (in fact, there was a semi-big deal made out of it) that they read each and every one and took them as seriously as possible. How can they when half of the evaluations are bubble sheets?

And even when the evaluations are written out, who reads them? The professors? I'm doubtful. I mean, I've never noticed any changes made from the suggestions or comments in the evaluations. Now, I have to admit that I have only a few specific classes and/or professors in mind—but no matter how many complaints or thoughtful suggestions given, the styles don't change. There is one professor that I know that bored me to tears (and to skipping more classes than I am generally inclined to)—and I know that the professor's style has not changed, despite the harsh criticisms received from students at the end of the semester.

Students generally don't get a lot of other chances to voice opinions (unless you're a columnist, but then you still don't know if people read it). Maybe there are too many people to talk to in order to voice a complaint or suggestion. Maybe all the advisors and department heads give us the run-around until we give up; maybe they just figure we'll whine about anything and tune us out because whatever it is, it's working for them (after all, they're all getting raises, too).

Maybe students should be involved in the committees formed on campus. I know there are students who are involved in deciding how much money organizations get, and I know that there are some things in which students are either not involved or too little involved, like parking and registration problems.

But the students don't exactly have what we can consider a voice in what's going on. In fact, the students never seem to have much of a voice. That strikes me as strange. Because the university is a company, and we are the consumers. And the company should always be asking for input on products and services. On a campus that once claimed "students first," the students should be more involved in decisions that will affect us and the students to come.

EDITORIAL

More letters to the editor have been received in the past two weeks regarding a specific issue than anyone at The News has ever seen before.

These letters, in all their variety, basically address a single question: Should homosexuals be tolerated and accepted in the Bowling Green community and the world at large?

The answer is an unequivocal "yes". And it is dismaying that at this point in time, in our supposedly modern and civilized era, we should even have to address that question at all.

That we must address that question is clear, however. We must encourage dialogue and input from all members of the community, to make sure that something like what happened in Wyoming does not happen here.

As we can see from the experiences of BG students who have lived in Laramie, the University environment - while hundreds of miles away geographically from the University of Wyoming - isn't so distant in terms of attitudes.

The News respects the right of people to disagree with each other. It is always better to do battle on the pages of a newspaper rather than on the streets of our city.

However, we will continue to stand for the inclusion and acceptance of all students and citizens into the community, no matter what their sexual orientation may be. We call on both students and administrators to eliminate any threatening environment that may exist here, either now or in the future. That task is everyone's responsibility.

In addition, The News will continue to offer these Opinion pages as a place where people can argue with words, not weapons.

HEPATITIS

Health officials to send warnings to 500

CINCINNATI (AP) — Health officials say about 500 people in the Cincinnati area may have contracted Hepatitis C from blood transfusions received before 1992.

The Hoxworth Blood Center said those people received blood from donors who tested positive for the virus once tests effectively started screening for Hepatitis C.

A mandate issued last month by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to blood centers requires them to identify and warn patients who may have been infected by tainted blood.

Health officials say about 3.9 million Americans have the virus, which slowly eats away at the liver. Most don't know they have Hepatitis C, whose main symptom is fatigue.

Spending bills revised again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers struggled to win last-minute changes in a huge $500 billion spending measure or to find out precisely what was in it as Congress prepared for its likely passage this week.

White House officials and congressional leaders agreed to the package last Thursday after a week of bargaining. But lawmakers spent Monday resolving lingering disputes over extending some tariffs and buttressing the Medicare home health-care program. Many members of Congress and aides professed ignorance about a measure that some officials said would number about 4,000 pages.

"The first thing I want to do is find out everything that's in it," said Rep. Michael Castle, R-Del.

Ironically, the mammoth bill includes provisions dealing with the government's Paperwork Reduction Act.

There was little suspense about the ultimate outcome: The House was expected to approve the measure Tuesday, and the Senate planned to ship it to President Clinton for his signature on Wednesday. To allow time, Congress planned to send Clinton a measure letting agencies stay open through Wednesday, the fifth such stopgap bill since fiscal 1999 began Oct. 1.

EXPLOSION

Gasoline pipeline kills 500 Nigerian

JESSE, Nigeria (AP) — The charred remains of victims still clutched the plastic cups, funnels and cans they intended to use to scoop gasoline from a punctured pipeline before it exploded in this southern Nigerian town.

The bodies were among at least 500 killed when the fuel erupted into a ball of fire over the weekend, an inferno so intense that flames — some shooting 65 feet in the air — still flared Monday as firefighters let the last of the gasoline burn away.

The burned body of one woman was found with her dead baby still strapped to her back. Many other victims were farmers and villagers sleeping in homes consumed by the blaze that also spread to nearby towns.

Grieving relatives came Monday to Jesse, about 180 miles south-east of Lagos, searching for relatives who ventured to the town drawn by rumors that a huge pool of spilled gasoline was free for the taking.

"It is finished," cried Charity Unurhoro, after finding the horribly burned bodies of her mother and brother. "Now everything is over for me."

Authorities believe the pipeline was punctured intentionally, and that scavengers' tools sparked the explosion Saturday, said an official for Nigeria's state petroleum corporation, speaking on condition of anonymity. Some newspaper reports, however, said it may have been a lighted cigarette that started the blaze.

TOBACCO

Smokers lawsuits against tobacco companies start

MIAMI (AP) — The first class-action lawsuit brought by smokers against the tobacco industry went to trial Monday with the plaintiffs' lawyer accusing cigarette companies of trying to confuse people about the dangers of smoking.

As many as 500,000 sick Florida smokers are seeking $200 billion in damages from the nation's five largest cigarette makers.

"The evidence will show, ladies and gentlemen, that this is an industry that has never accepted their responsibility — corporate responsibility — for the devastating health consequences caused by cigarettes," lawyer Stanley Rosenblatt said in his opening statement to the jury.

The only previous class-action lawsuit against the industry to make it to trial was that of flight attendants who claimed secondhand smoke made them sick. In that case, also handled by Rosenblatt, the tobacco industry agreed to a $300 million settlement to establish a research foundation.

14 dead, 3 missing after Texas storms

Monday rains flooded parts of Texas again.

The Associated Press

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas — Rain deluged the Texas Hill Country again Monday, washing away cattle fences and hampering the search for three children carried off by floodwaters. At least 14 people have died in Texas storms since the weekend.

National Guardsmen had hoped to search by helicopter for a missing 6-year-old boy, and Gov. George W. Bush had scheduled a flight to survey damage in San Antonio. Both flights were canceled because of severe weather.

Sixty counties — nearly a fourth of Texas — have experienced flooding, said Tom Millwee, state coordinator of the division of emergency management.

Bush said the state will assess damage as soon as possible to apply for federal aid.

"Obviously, the worst loss is loss of life. We can't replace life. We can replace material goods," the governor told reporters in San Antonio. "Nature is devastating. It was only three months ago that we were praying for rain, and now ... we've got too much rain."

Thousands of animals were set loose by a rain-swollen San Marcos River that washed away pens, barns and hundreds of miles of fences.

Caldwell County Extension Agent Lytle Arche estimated as many as 5,000 cattle could be roaming in his county. He expects at least 10,000 more to wander from their pastures in neighboring Guadalupe and Gonzales counties.

The counties lie along the Guadalupe River, just east of flood-ravaged San Antonio and New Braunfels. The river is usually about 150 feet across. On Monday, it was three miles wide in places and spreading.

Cattle had been moved to high ground, but the ground just wasn't high enough.

New Braunfels suffered some of the worst damage when the normally tranquil Guadalupe River rushed over its banks, flooding neighborhoods and sending 1,400 people to shelters for the night. The local newspaper, the New Braunfels Herald-

Zeitung, put its Sunday newspaper out on Monday.

Thirty miles to the south, San Antonio got up to 20 inches of rain over the weekend.

"This is unprecedented for the San Antonio area," said Joe Candelario, the city's emergency management coordinator. "This is a first in our history, to have that much rain in a 24-hour period."

Flooding closed a four-mile section of a highway into San Antonio — two miles on either side of the Olmos Dam, which was nearing its capacity of 48 feet.

Fourteen Texans have died in the storms since Saturday — 12 in floods and two in tornadoes.

Immigration deal signed in Florida

Florida governor signs landmark immigration deal.

The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The federal government will have to handle and pay for any future mass migrations to Florida under an agreement signed Monday by Gov. Lawton Chiles.

The deal is the first between the federal government and a state that provides for a joint response to a mass influx of aliens, said Doris Meissner, commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The agreement comes four years after hundreds of Cubans and Haitians tried to come ashore every day in south Florida.

"Four years ago, I declared a state of emergency in south Florida ... because the federal government failed to adequately enforce U.S. immigration law and protect the state of Florida," Chiles said.

"Today I'm declaring victory because the federal government is stepping up and will assume full responsibility for future mass migration response operations."

Under the agreement, INS will be the lead agency and may ask for help from Florida — but will reimburse the state for its costs.

"The way to deal with such a situation is a coordinated response where the federal government takes the lead," Ms. Meissner said.

Four years ago, some 30,000 Cubans came to South Florida. State officials estimated costs climbed to $50 million, but Florida received just $18 million from a federal immigration emergency fund.

Under the agreement, federal immigration officials in south Florida will have the power to move staff and resources to Florida without having to wait for approval from Washington.

Also, no long-term detention sites will be built in Florida for immigrants who make landfall in the state and state law enforcement officers will be empowered to enforce federal immigration law.

Frankie Yankovic buried in Cleveland

□ Accordions play as mourners pay last respects to polka king.

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — His funeral procession serenaded by accordion players, polka king Frankie Yankovic was buried in his hometown Monday as mourners remembered him for his love of both music and people.

More than 700 relatives, friends and fans crowded into a funeral Mass at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Yankovic's parish on the east side of Cleveland and the site of one of his early gigs.

"I think that Frank's greatest gift was he knew how to make people happy — how to forget their problems, how to enjoy the gift of life," the Rev. John Kumse said in his eulogy.

Yankovic, 83, died of heart failure at his home near Tampa, Fla., last Wednesday. He had undergone both heart and brain surgery in the past year.

Yankovic won the first Grammy ever awarded for polka in 1986 and popularized the Slovenian style of polka, which features accordion, clarinet and saxophone.

"Just Because," Yankovic's signature tune, and "Blue Skirt Waltz" each sold more than 1 million copies in the 1940s.

Other hits included "In Heaven There Is No Beer," "Who Stole the Kishka" and "Too Fat Polka."

A few fans snapped photos and others held video cameras as Yankovic's casket was carried into the church past somber-faced mourners and an honor guard of Army veterans.

Yankovic served in the Army during World War II and was wounded at the Battle of the Bulge. The tolling of the church's funeral bell was the only sound.

But as the coffin came out of church, eight of Yankovic's accordion-playing colleagues picked up their instruments and played a chorus of "Blue Skirt Waltz."

"He has been an influence on my life since I was a little kid," said Jerry Robotka, 59, an accordionist from Detroit who left school at 18 to tour with Yankovic's band.

Robbery occurred at Huntington bank

BG News

The Huntington Bank, South Main Street in downtown Bowling Green was robbed Monday.

A white male reportedly stole an undetermined amount of cash off the counter at the bank.

The suspect is described as 5 feet 11 inches tall and 150 to 160 pounds. He was wearing a dark baseball cap and a black Carhart jacket.

No vehicle was spotted leaving the scene, yet the Bowling Green Police Department said the suspect fled northbound from the bank on foot.

Huntington also has a Bowling Green branch office on North Main Street and one on the Bowling Green State University campus.

According to the BGPD records office, the last bank robbery in Bowling Green occurred at the Mid Am Bank office on North Main Street in March 1995.

plinary action which may be brought against him.

"USG cannot discipline me because of the first amendment and the freedom of speech. I am certain justice will prevail and that I will be acquitted of any wrong doing," Shuler said.

According to Hussey, Shuler only can be reprimanded as his role as a senator in USG, but he is entitled to speak his opinion due to the freedom of speech.

Tim Marshall, special projects coordinator of the organization VISION came to the meeting not to attack Shuler, but to offer solutions including reprimanding Shuler for his actions.

Some of the solutions Marshall offered included USG writing a letter in The News emphasizing the fact the letter written by Shuler was his individual opinion, not his opinion as a representative of USG.

Marshall also encouraged members of USG and other organizations to attend VISION meetings, and for the senators to attend diversity training programs. Overall he believes USG should take steps to clean up their overall image.

John Paul Calvitta, sophomore english education major, came to the meeting to share his voice and to support peoples differences.

"I came to make my voice heard and support diversity that we're here and we're queer. I plan on coming to more USG meetings because that is how things get changed," Calvitta said. "Change happens because of a process not a reaction."

Members of USG were encouraged by the number of people at the meeting, and would like to see this type of turnout on a regular basis. MaryAnn Russell, USG vice president, thought the turnout was a step in the right direction.

"We were ecstatic about the turnout, and would like to see a turn out more often so people can learn about all the issues talked about in USG, not one in specific and so people can represent diversity," Russell said.

house, incumbent Republican Randall Gardner and Democratic challenger Kurt Young, on the state's position for providing equal and quality education through state funds.

Gardner said that the state cannot be expected to fix the system alone. Policies made by the state are voted on by the public, and if the public votes down the policy, the state cannot continue with that solution.

"Nobody wants to see kids go to schools like (the ones mentioned earlier), however, voters are sick of being asked for money," Young said.

Becki Alderton, senior early childhood and elementary education major, disagreed with the candidates' reasoning.

She argued that the legislators can fix the system and affect public decisions by acting as educators for the public. She said that they need to publicize the issues and inform the voters of the importance of the issues being voted on.

"Many people aren't aware of what their vote is representing," Talley said. "Take Issue 2, people were told to vote 'yes' or vote 'no.' How many people really know what Issue 2 was and how it would have affected education?" Talley said.

Alderton's and Talley's opinions reflect those of many of the other students who attended the seminar.

Gardner and Young emphasized their commitments to education and their support of solving the funding problems facing

Ohio schools, yet said that the solution is not their responsibility alone.

However, the education majors feel the legislators have the responsibility to seek a more active role in the funding crisis.

"They can walk away, but we will have to deal with the school problems everyday," said Alderton.

She added that this issue is important because "education affects everyone, in every business."

Jain said the IBA is hoping to bring together students interested in all fields of business. However, he said the organization is open to all students, not just those in the business field.

"Some majors, especially the science based ones like physical therapy, involve a high level of stress," Keeley said.

"We are going to create center, where these students can go that offers a lot of advisor support as well as a place where the students can go and research careers," she said.

University President Sidney Ribeau said the opening of the new facilities is a "happy time."

"It is already a good program," Ribeau said. "It will only get stronger through the better facilities. They were much needed."

What Can You Do With Degrees In Accounting And MIS?

KEEP HACKERS OUT OF CORPORATE NETWORKS!

Every hour of the day, all over the world, networked information systems are under attack... from the outside and from within:

- Network "crackers," corporate spies and glory seekers threaten the information security and integrity of businesses and government institutions alike.
- Bank accounts, personal information, credit card numbers, private e-mail, medical records, tax and academic history... everything is stored on a computer somewhere and at risk of unauthorized disclosure, modification, or misuse.

As a member of Crowe Chizek's Systems Assurance Consulting Group you can use your unique business and MIS skills to provide organizations the business process and the technical means to thwart hackers, manage information risk and obtain assurance about the safety of their assets.

Grenade attack stops Mideast talks

□ Palestinian activists held in custody after injuring 64 Israelis.

The Associated Press

BEERSHEBA, Israel — The No. 14 bus stop was packed with soldiers waiting for a ride to a nearby army base during Monday morning rush-hour when suddenly there was a hissing noise.

"Grenade!" someone shouted, and many of the young recruits dropped to the ground.

The attack, by a Palestinian activist in the Islamic militant group Hamas, injured 64 people and disrupted the Mideast peace summit in Maryland, seen as perhaps the last chance for wrapping up an agreement on a West Bank troop withdrawal.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu announced he was suspending all talks with the Palestinians except those on security issues, and said he would not remain at the negotiating table for an "unlimited period of time."

Three victims were in serious condition after the 8 a.m. attack in the Negev Desert town of Beersheba, 50 miles south of Jerusalem, and many soldiers were among the wounded.

The attack began when the assailant, concealing something in a white bag, walked toward the bus stop at the edge of Beersheba's central bus station and hurled two grenades, witnesses said.

The stop was packed with soldiers waiting for a ride to a nearby army base, among them 19-year-old Tamar Glustoron.

"Suddenly I heard a hissing noise," Glustoron said. "Someone yelled, 'It's a grenade.'"

Glustoron, who was injured by shrapnel in the head, back and legs, said she and most of her fellow recruits dropped to the ground to seek cover.

From the bus stop, the assailant ran across the street and was struck by a bus turning the corner. A construction worker, Avi Friedman, said he then jumped the Palestinian from behind and wrestled him to the ground. The assailant was taken into custody.

The blast shattered nearby windows and left army-issue olive duffel bags and clothes strewn on the pavement. A soldier's polished black boots, with the socks stuffed inside, lay on a traffic island.

A street sweeper, who had lost consciousness, lay on the pavement, his body covered by blood, said Ezra Zion who owns a nearby restaurant.

Officials at Sorokka Hospital in Beersheba said 64 people were injured, including a 15-year-old boy in critical, but stable condition, and two in serious condition. Most of the others suffered minor injuries.

Depth helps Falcons run

□ An unhealthy BG squad finished seventh at the Central Collegiate Championship.

By KEVIN GUTEKUNST
The BG News

As a rule for life, one should never take his or her good health for granted.

This season, the Bowling Green men's cross country team has found this to be very true. It has not been an uncommon occurrence during the season to see the Falcons competing without a totally healthy squad.

Last weekend at the Central Collegiate Championships, this was again the case as the team ran without senior co-captain Pat Carney and another consistent performer, freshman Rob Glatz.

Still, the Falcons refused to fold, finishing a respectable seven out of 13 teams.

Sophomore Kreg Hatfield led the BG pack, as he finished 19th in the race with a time of 25:48. Junior Dan Flaute was not far behind Hatfield, finishing 27th with a time of 26:06 over five miles.

The Falcons' third and fourth runners, junior Steve Chapa and sophomore David Anderson ran closely together in the race. Chapa finished 33rd with a time of 26:18 and Anderson ran a time of 26:23 while finishing 37th.

One of the biggest criteria for a good team is whether or not they have the depth to endure when the top performers go down. Senior Jim Weckesser, the team's top performer all season, had an off race. But Hatfield stepped in for Weckesser and performed well.

"I am not surprised that Kreg was able to step up and run a

CC shutout by national teams

□ The Falcon women are unsatisfied with finish at the Michigan Interregionals.

By MARK WIESE
The BG News

On a cool, rainy day in Ann Arbor, Mich., BG fell short of its goal finishing a dissatisfying seventh place at the Michigan Interregional.

The women's cross country team went into the meet with one goal in mind—beating one of the six teams ranked in front of them in the national polls.

The 27th-ranked Falcons finished with a total of 186 points. They were 26 points shy of 23rd-ranked Florida on Sunday.

"We placed where we are ranked nationally, but this was not our goal and we are not satisfied with the result," coach Steve Price said.

Although BG was dissatisfied with its finish, there were bright spots. Perhaps the brightest was the eleventh place finish of senior Wendy Licht-Ordway. Her eleventh place finish put her among some of the best runners in the nation.

"Wendy Licht-Ordway may have ran the best race of her life," Price said. "If our team does not qualify for the NCAA Championships, Wendy definitely has a chance to qualify as an individual."

BG had another bright spot, they defeated quality teams such as Notre Dame and Penn State, despite the finish.

Host Michigan won the meet with a low score of 71. Michigan showed why it deserved to be ranked number three in the nation with wins over nationally-ranked teams.

However, the Wolverines did not have an easy win as nationally-ranked Georgetown, Wake Forest and Washington nipped at their heels the whole race. William and Mary and Florida also finished strong, coming in ahead of BG by only a small margin.

After this meet, BG is now knocking on the door to get into the NCAA Championships. The door has closed slightly but the Falcons are still optimistic about their chances to get to the NCAA meet.

"The team has great potential but needs to train harder to get to the level of higher ranked teams," Licht-Ordway said. "We have the mentality to win, we just need to go out there and do it."

The Falcons need to learn and build off this weekend's meet since the MAC Championships are less than two weeks away.

It was a scene similar to "Braveheart" and, in the end, Wallace won the battle. Chris Wallace that is.

Anxiously hopping up and down on the sidelines, Wallace spoke to his unit like a sergeant in the thick of a war. He took them into a game, for which the consequences would decide the fate of a season.

It was the right to stay alive in the Mid-American Conference race. Both teams already had one loss in the MAC and another would most likely end a chance at a championship appearance.

Midway through the fourth quarter with Toledo holding a 24-16 lead, Wallace kept up the constant preaching to his offense.

"This is the drive to the championship," he said as the unit huddled around him. "We need to take time off the clock and we need to score. It is why we came to Toledo."

The offense did not score on the drive, but it took lots of time off the clock. And the Falcons, a touchdown and two-point conversion behind, were running out of time.

The final score was Toledo 24, Bowling Green 16.

Wallace slaughtered the Falcons, throwing for 279 yards and three touchdowns, two passing and one rushing.

In a rivalry which the Rockets had dominated for three years, Toledo wrote the next chapter for the bragging rights of Northwest

Maxwell's experience tells of future NFL television

□ Dick Maxwell spoke to sport management about the television schedule in the NFL and other issues.

By G. MICHAEL GRAHAM
The BG News

Even though the National Football League has been around for over 75 years, it probably wouldn't exist today without television.

After last week, Bowling Green State University sports management students learned more about the industry from a high-ranking public relations official.

Dick Maxwell, the Director of Broadcasting Services for the National Football League since 1990, spoke Thursday and Friday about many issues, one being broadcasting, to several classes.

He began Friday's session by talking on the television market. Each team gets one game broadcasted on television per week. Maxwell said it helps each team in terms of advertising and fan interest.

"It keeps your team in the race and makes every game important," Maxwell said. "All politics are on local games. There is also a higher demand for advertising."

There is a growing concern among fans as to whether or not the average fans will be able to watch NFL games on television. Maxwell said the organization is sensitive to taking things off free TV. He considers the fans a huge part of the game.

"Cable is a form of pay," Maxwell said. "There is an 18 cent monthly fee that covers the ESPN rights fee. Any game on ESPN has to be shown on free TV of the two market teams if the game is sold out."

Later in the session, Maxwell talked about his career.

The 1970 University graduate took a job with the Denver Broncos in 1971 as the assistant director of public relations and later as the director of promotions. From 1976-77, he was the PR director for Tampa Bay before becoming NFC information director for the NFL from 1978-89.

He landed the job with the Broncos through a man named Bob Peck.

"In 1970, I worked as a student in the SID (sports information director) office," Maxwell said. "Doyt Perry, the athletic director at the time, needed someone to fill a spot so I was a PR director. A man named Bob Peck wanted me to join him with the Broncos. Later, I went to the Bucs."

He listed his experience with the Broncos as one of the luckiest times in his career, while his experience with the Buccaneers was one of the worst.

"I was in the right place at the right time at a relatively young age with Denver," Maxwell noted. "Tampa was an expansion team in 1976. They lost 26 straight games once. It was a difficult time."

Maxwell said University students need two vital things to survive today's society.

"You definitely need the college background," Maxwell said. "You also need as much practical experience as possible whether it be working with the BG News or internships."

BG still in hunt

□ BG wins and loses 2-0 in weekend action.

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

With the regular season's end rapidly approaching and the Mid American Conference tournament ahead, the Bowling Green women's soccer team ended a two-game weekend with a split. The Falcons defeated Marshall 2-0 and lost to Ohio University by the identical score.

After the strong weekend, the Falcons record moves to 7-7-1 overall and 4-4-1 in MAC play. BG plays Michigan State, Detroit and Miami to round out the regular season in the next two weeks.

The Falcons dominated and defeated Marshall Friday. They outshot the Thundering Herd 12-4 with strong defense attributed to the play of junior goalkeeper/forward Michelle Lisy. BG's goals were scored by freshman forward Tracy Gleixner and sophomore midfielder Janice Mentrup. Beth Wechsler added an assist on Gleixner's goal.

"I think that the whole team played well this whole weekend," Gleixner said. "We really needed the win against Marshall to stay alive in the MAC and we got what we needed. Ohio University proved to be a very good team."

Lisy, who drew the start in goal over struggling freshman goalkeepers Sarah Gawel and Sarah Marchant, recorded two saves in the win against Marshall. Her win was the first shutout in school history.

"We played well this weekend and only gave up two goals in two games," BG coach Tom Piccirillo said. "Our defense and goalkeeping was much better than it had been in previous matches and that is what we stressed in practice."

Lisy got the start in goal Sunday but was replaced by Gawel in the second half because of an injury.

"We played strong and our defense keeps improving but we still have things that we need to work on for our next games," Piccirillo said.

The Falcons continue their road trip with a stop at Michigan

State Wednesday for a 3 p.m. contest.

Padres retreat home

□ San Diego regroups after two losses in New York.

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Tony Gwynn was standing alone in right field, checking out the grass torn up a day earlier by an NFL game, and his hearty laugh echoed throughout the empty ballpark.

Gwynn was the first player on the field for the San Diego Padres' practice Monday afternoon, and his disposition matched the weather — bright sunshine, blue California sky, temperatures in the 70s.

A change of scenery for the World Series, for sure, from the subway trains clacking outside Yankee Stadium to the palm trees inside Qualcomm Stadium.

But a change in the Padres' luck against the New York Yankees? No telling.

The Yankees look unbeatable so far, taking a 2-0 lead into Game 3 Tuesday night. David Cone will start against former Yankees pitcher Sterling Hitchcock, the NLCS MVP.

"What I've seen from New York in the first two games, I'll have to admit, is very impressive," Gwynn said. "We're down 0-2, but we can get back in this thing if we play our game, which is pitching and defense and some timely hits."

Gwynn has done his part, tied for the Series lead with four hits. Yet unless Padres pitching improves, it could be over real soon.

Of the 44 teams to take a 2-0 lead in the World Series, 33 have gone on to win the championship.

Then again, the Yankees were wiped out at home by Atlanta in the first two games in 1996 before coming back to win four in a row. Cone began that comeback with a win in Game 3.

Cone traveled to the West Coast on Sunday, before the Yankees romped 9-3 in Game 2. He was already in San Diego relaxing while watching the victory.

"This is the time of year when pitchers feel a bit fatigued," he said. "I'm looking forward to closing this out and getting a nice rest."

Hitchcock already has beaten

Houston's Randy Johnson and Atlanta's Greg Maddux and Tom Glavine in the playoffs. Now he's likely to face his toughest challenge, trying to shut down a Yankees team that scored nine runs in two straight nights against San Diego.

"They can hit. Bottom line, they can hit," Hitchcock said.

Hitchcock, however, will have a few advantages that Padres starters Kevin Brown and Andy Ashby did not have. For one thing, he's feeling a little better, aside from some congestion — a flu bug bit the San Diego staff right before the opener.

Hitchcock will have two other factors in his favor — he'll be facing a lineup that does not include a designated hitter, and he'll be pitching at twilight.

The DH is not used for games at the NL park, meaning Cone, a career .152 hitter, will be batting. That could mean Chili Davis will be on the bench, although Yankees manager Joe Torre held out the "wild card" possibility Davis might play left field.

"David Cone is sure I picked him for Game 3 because of his bat," Torre joked. "Without the DH, you have to pay a lot more attention. You have to be aware of double-switches. You have that situation that haunts National League managers — 'should I try to get a pitcher through an inning because he's the second or third hitter the next inning?'"

Game 3 is scheduled to begin at 5:20 p.m. PDT, a time when shadows can make it difficult for hitters to see the ball.

Despite the early start, the park should be almost filled by the first pitch. Unlike crowds for other Southern California baseball teams, the Padres fans are known for making noise.

"It's 65,000 people in your face wanting you to do well," Hitchcock said.

Such a raucous crowd would be different than what Game 1 winner David Wells remembers from his days growing up in San Diego, when he attended "hundreds" of games at the park.

"People in New York are real aggressive. They try to intimidate you. It's just their nature," Wells said. "I think California people are more laid back. New Yorkers come across as tough guys."

great race," sophomore Aaron Usher said. "Our greatest strength is our depth. We do not have one real star. We always have people to fall back on."

While this season the team has been mediocre, they have been able to handle it.

"We have been very resilient and consistent all season," Chapa said. "We tend to bounce back from bad performances."

Falcon coach Sterling Martin was mostly satisfied with his team's performance.

"Everyone put it on the line," Martin said. "They did all they could in the circumstances we were dealt. We can be a legitimate team if we can get healthy."

Central Michigan was clearly the best team in Friday's race.

The Chippewas' had three of the first five finishers in the race, including the first place runner.

Ohio. It is the first time Toledo has won four straight over BG.

Wallace issued his battle cry before the game, the outspoken leader of defending MAC West champions.

"You don't realize how many people out there in the stands were wishing they were back in this locker room wanting to play one more time against BG," Wallace said. "You don't know how many guys didn't get to play the way they wanted to in a BG game or didn't get the win."

The Falcons started the game with two quick touchdowns, shocking the Rockets with a 13-0 lead. Both teams fed off the emotion of the rivalry and the crowd — the sixth largest in Glass Bowl history. But it was BG who made the first move.

Temper burst, as mixtures of Blue and Gold fought with Brown and Orange. After the Falcons' reverse touchdown pass, a scuffle broke out in the endzone and players had to be restrained.

"We were fired up," said junior Rocket inside linebacker Jason Lamar. "But we didn't execute, which contributed to our frustration. So you tend to make mistakes, but we settled down."

Toledo relaxed and came back with a 49-yard field goal from Todd France. Wallace then provided the rest of the fireworks with two deep touchdown passes of 44 and 42 yards to finish off the Falcons.

Wallace has a habit of putting daggers through BG. Last year, as a junior, Wallace threw for five touchdowns at BG, a Toledo record at the time.

With Northern Illinois' upset of MAC West leader Central Michigan, Toledo (4-3, 3-1 MAC) is now in first place. The Rockets won a tough battle on Saturday night, but the war for the MAC title has just begun.

Ratings slip, Yanks dominate series

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees are so dominant that they apparently have put an end — at least temporarily — to baseball's television ratings resurgence.

The Yankees, who set an American League record with 114 wins this season, dispatched the San Diego Padres so easily in Game 2 of the World Series that viewers began looking for other television options.

Fox's overnight rating for Sunday's game — which New York led 7-0 after three innings — was 14.3, and it could end up as the second lowest-rated, prime-time Series game. It fell 12 percent from NBC's 16.3 overnight rating last year for Game 2 between Cleveland and Florida.

MAC names players of the week

TOLEDO — Northern Illinois cornerback Benji Peacock and Western Michigan quarterback Tim Lester were chosen as the Mid-American Conference players of the week.

Peacock, a sophomore from Miami, blocked a field goal and caused a fumble end zone as Northern Illinois snapped the longest losing streak in Division IA Saturday with a 16-6 win over Central Michigan. Peacock also had a sack and broke up two passes.

The Huskies had lost 23 straight games before Saturday.

Lester, a junior from Wheaton, Ill., set a Western Michigan record with 432 passing yards to lead the Broncos past Eastern Michigan 45-35 on Saturday.

Taylor arrested

The Associated Press

ST. PETE BEACH, Fla. — Lawrence Taylor, who has battled drug addiction for more than a decade, was charged Monday with possession of crack cocaine after making a purchase from an undercover police officer.

Members of the St. Pete Beach Special Response Team entered his room at the Sandpiper Resort hotel shortly after 2 a.m. and arrested the former NFL star and Victoria Corey, 41, who was identified as an employee of L.T. Enterprises.

Police said Taylor, 39, purchased $50 worth of crack cocaine from the undercover officer. Officers found drug paraphernalia in his room and Taylor admitted he knew of its presence, an arrest report said.

Taylor, who was in town for a celebrity golf tournament, said he was set up by an officer who badgered him all day until he finally bought the drugs.

"Any time a law enforcement agency can solicit you all day and you tell them no and then they have the nerve to come to my room at 2 a.m. and try to sell me drugs, that's bull," Taylor said as he left the Pinellas County Jail after posting $15,500 bond. "I'm just waiting for my day in court."

Thomas Melani, an attorney who represents Taylor, said his son Michael, also an attorney, spoke with Taylor by telephone.

"He indicated it was not what it appears to be, and he claims it's a setup," the senior Melani said. "At this point, it's only an accusation."

Taylor, 39, was released from the Pinellas County Jail less than 12 hours later.

St. Pete Beach Det. Dean Horiopoulos declined to give specifics about how the drug deal was arranged, saying only that police had received information that Taylor was looking to purchase drugs.

The detective said Taylor identified Corey as his secretary.

Taylor, who helped the New York Giants win two Super Bowl titles during his 13-year NFL career that ended in 1993, has battled drugs for more than a decade. In 1994, he was arrested on similar charges in South Carolina.

He enrolled in a pretrial intervention program that would wipe the charges from his record by completing 60 hours of community service and submitting to drug counseling and random drug testing.

"The only way to fight it is not to do it," Taylor said in 1996. "You may stay clean for 30 years, but you're still close to it and will always be an addict."

Taylor also underwent rehabilitation for a cocaine problem in 1986 and was suspended by the NFL two years later for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy.

BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY

October 20, 1998

Catherine (Karen Von Glahn, left) confronts her psychiatrist (Heather Seiffer, right), in a scene from Bowling Green State University's production of "Standing on My Knees".

Balance between brilliance and mental illness portrayed in play 'Standing On My Knees'

John Olive's "Standing On My Knees," the story of a poet battling schizophrenia, will be presented by Elsewhere Productions Oct. 21-24.

Catherine, an up-and-coming poet, fights to find a balance between creative brilliance and mental illness, while dealing with the pressures of everyday life through her lover, her best friend and her psychologist. The play weaves through the real and the surreal allowing a glimpse into one woman's madness.

Directed by Taylor Doherty, a doctoral student in theatre, the cast includes Amy Monfort, a master's degree student from St. Louis, as Alice; Brad Abner, a senior theatre major from Columbus, as Robert; Heather Seiffer, a senior theatre major from Hamilton, as Joanne; and Karen Von Glahn, a freshman theatre major from Summit, as Catherine.

"Standing On My Knees" will be presented at 8 p.m. on Oct. 21-24 and 2 p.m. on Oct. 24, and the cost of tickets is $3 with no reserved seats. Tickets go on sale one hour before the performance and are limited to the first 60 patrons. (Tickets for Elsewhere Productions are not included in the Theatre Pass.)

Note: This play includes some adult themes and language.

EVENTS

Oktoberfest planned at St. Thomas More parish on Oct. 23

October just wouldn't be the same if there wasn't an Oktoberfest. And don't fret either; the German Club is sponsoring one 6 p.m. Oct. 23 and has plenty of sauerkraut and bratwurst for everyone.

This year Oktoberfest will be a non-alcoholic event coinciding with Alcohol Awareness Month.

Kristie Foell, faculty advisor for the German Club, says that they want everyone to come to the event, and having the event for those 21 and over would not allow everyone to enjoy the festival.

This year's event will be featuring "the Deutschmeisters" an authentic German polka band that has performed in Germany and Austria.

There will be a King and Queen elections for those who want to sport their German attire.

The cost for Oktoberfest is $5 which includes $3 worth of food and for those who feel up to the challenge there will be an apple cider chugging contest.

John Schutze, vice president for the German Club says "Oktoberfest is known world wide and this is a great chance to experience another culture and above all have fun."

Oktoberfest will be held in St. Thomas More gymnasium. For more information contact St. Thomas More at 352-7555.

LATINOPALOOZA set for Oct. 28 in celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month

In recognition of Hispanic Heritage Month, a number of activities are continuing through October on the University campus. The following is a listing of remaining events celebrating Hispanic heritage:

Oct. 22

Congreso Band Workshop. South American Musicians discuss and perform on the importance of music in the Latin American Culture. Location to be announced.

Oct. 24, 4 - 11:15 p.m.

LATINOPALOOZA will return to campus at Anderson Arena. This event was voted "Best Campus Event for 1997" by UAO. Celebrating culture, history, and diversity, this monumental evening is a chance for the BGSU and surrounding communities to experience the spectacular Latino culture through authentic music, dance, and food. Highlighting the event will be four live bands, folkloric dancers, pinatas, grito contest, raffle, and much more!!!

Oct. 28, 1:30 - 2:30 p.m.

The Lecture Series Mesa Oblicua "Growing Up Latino: A Panel Discussion" will begin in the Amani Room of the Student Union. As October's installment for this monthly lecture series on Latino issues, "Growing Up Latino" will feature a panel of Latino Student Union members as well as other Latino/a undergraduates. By creating a dialogue on relevant issues of growing up in the dynamic Latino culture, this lecture series attempts to dispel cultural stereotypes and build community. All are welcome. For further information call Manny Vadillo at 372-6867.

Oct. 30, 9 p.m. - midnight

Dia de los Muertos Baile (Halloween Dance) will take place in the Amani Room in the University Commons. Capping off the month's events, this dance will enchant those in attendance while following the theme of "El Dia de Los Muertos" (Day of the Dead). El Dia de Los Muertos is perhaps the most popular holiday in Mexico. Traditionally this is a time for families to come together to honor their ancestors.

Get into the swing with dance, mocktails this Friday night

Everyone else is swinging so why can't we? Well, now we can.

In the past few years swing music has taken the country by storm. With low budget movie hits like Swingers and Swing Kids, plus the national success of musical acts like the Cherry Poppin Daddies and the Brian Setzer Orchestra, it seems that you can't get away from swing, but then again does anyone really want to?

This new fad just proves that students at BGSU are like all other people their age all across the country, we want our swing.

Well, now we have it for you because the Wellness Connection and the BGSU Binge Drinking and Violence Prevention Program are making sure that BGSU students get what they want.

This Friday, Oct. 23, they, along with many other organizations will be sponsoring BG Swings. Located in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom, on the second floor of the University Student Union, BG Swings is slated to be one of the more exciting events of the semester.

The swinging kicks into high gear at 10 p.m. with a DJ playing nonstop swing music along with dance instructors on hand to teach beginners how it is done.

While you are taking a break from the action on the dance floor you will be able to treat yourself to a refreshing mocktail.

Mocktails are non-alcoholic beverages that resemble the taste or name of alcoholic beverages.

Along with the mocktails there will prizes given out to those who attend. Each person will receive a raffle ticket upon entry. Those who attend the event dressed in "proper swing attire," or khakis, will receive extra raffle tickets. Swing prizes will be given away every 30 minutes.

This event is in coordination with National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week. During the week of Oct. 19-25 college campuses all over the country will be recognizing the dangers of binge drinking and hosting alcohol-free alternative events for students.

BG Swings is free and open to the public and runs 10 p.m. to 1 a.m.

For more information on BG Swings, Alcohol Awareness week or any other Wellness Connection event contact the Wellness Connection at 372-WELL
